VICE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

The Mohawk Valley Library System helped member libraries enrich their communities throughout 2018, providing services that expand library access to books and other resources, enrich library classes and events, and assist with communications, marketing and advocacy.

Early in the year, the emphasis was on communications and advocacy. MVLS introduced the stories.mvls.info blog that highlights library impact stories in our communities. The system also worked with several libraries on budget campaigns. Eight libraries held successful budget votes in the spring, culminating in the successful vote to reorganize the Johnstown Public Library as a school district public library. These votes demonstrate that communities recognize the value of libraries and that effective communications and regular budget votes lead to sustainable libraries.

Summer brought the annual statewide Summer Reading Program which MVLS brings to libraries and their communities, as well as local enhancements like the Read it Forward project and Science @ the Library programs. Classes and events for adults are also provided, including the NYSCA book discussion and Authors Among Us programs. MVLS offerings continued in the fall with the Library Moon Walk project, one of many collaborative projects done with the Southern Adirondack and Upper Hudson Library Systems.

MVLS assistance with construction projects was very evident later in the year. Six libraries applied and were approved for 2018 construction grants. Fort Plain opened their newly completed center section of their master building plan; and Gloversville moved in to their newly expanded and renovated building with a gala grand opening in November. We now await the opening of Schenectady's new Mont Pleasant branch.

Finally, there were some transitions to take note of in 2018. Long-time board member and board President Bonnie Kerr resigned in September. Two new members, Felicia Spivey from Schenectady and Rosemary Barger from Amsterdam, began service on the MVLS board.

MVLS remains committed and well-equipped to help member libraries succeed. If your library would like assistance with any project just contact MVLS to see what they can do to help your library meet community needs.

DIRECTOR'S REPORT

"Tell me a story!" my kids used to beg when they were young. And I would usually try to oblige. But it wasn't easy. It seems that even preschool kids have standards. At our house, the rules for stories were that they had to have at least one character with a name and something had to happen to that named character. It didn't seem to matter what happened; it could be completely ridiculous. As long as something happened to a character who was important enough to have a name, it was a story, and everyone was satisfied.

Our libraries all witness multiple stories every day. And all of these stories have at least one character and some action. Sure, sometimes it is common, ordinary action. But on many other occasions library stories are profound. They are stories of how the library saved the day and had a lasting impact on a life. Just think of all of the ways your library changes lives. Young children discover the joy of reading and lay the groundwork for lifelong learning and educational success by adding words to their vocabulary. Displaced workers learn the computer skills and access the resources they need to find new jobs. Older children are introduced to science and other STEAM components; and develop lifelong interests that lead to careers. Families access free entertainment, find connections with other families and access online resources that they can't afford at home. Older adults connect with community resources that keep them engaged as valued members of the community. The list of library impacts goes on and on.

While there are some library users who are familiar with at least a few of these library impact stories, many other community members really don't know what happens at the library, and don't understand how the library creates a strong community. And they never will understand unless we tell them.

That's why MVLS is putting a strong emphasis on communications. Our ability to tell the library story can create positive change for the future of our libraries, our communities, and all of our library users and not-yet users. There were many examples in MVLS in 2018 of libraries demonstrating and telling the story of that library impact. This effective communications leads to stronger, more sustainable libraries, more vibrant and attractive communities, and more, and more well served, library users. Are you looking for a stronger, more sustainable library. Then find a character, show how their life was changed and tell your library's story.

What's your library story? MVLS would be very pleased to help you find and tell that story, to spread the message that your library is an essential element to a strong community.

- 9,634 attended classes, programs and events
- 28,707 computer sessions facilitated
- 46,282 items onsite for community use
- 8,967 active library users
- The Amsterdam Free Library was one of the keystones of Governor Cuomo's Downtown Revitalization Initiative. The library's share of Amsterdam's $10 million will help with the construction of a new addition to add modern conference rooms, a large community meeting room and classrooms. A modern glass entrance at the parking lot with a new full sized elevator are some of the planned elements. This will help transform our library into a modern innovation hub, business incubator and community resource center. Education, and the institutions that make it their mission to educate, are the key to carrying Amsterdam into the 22nd Century.

MVLS Mission Statement

The Mohawk Valley Library System educates, empowers and supports public libraries in Fulton, Montgomery, Schenectady and Schoharie Counties, helping libraries enrich their communities.

MVLS Services

- Resource sharing including cooperative purchasing, interlibrary loan and delivery
- An integrated library computer system with full network and workstation support
- Specialized services to specific groups including adult literacy and TASC students, people with disabilities, the economically disadvantaged and those institutionalized
- Early literacy, family literacy, children's and teen services
- Programs for adult learners including reading, job seeking and digital literacy skills
- Expertise, vision and innovation offered through Continuation Education and Consultation
- Networking, information exchange and collaboration among libraries and with other agencies
- Promotion of library services in the wider community

MVLS Impact Statement

The Mohawk Valley Library System saves taxpayer's money by delivering services, vision and expertise to public libraries and communities in the Mohawk Valley. MVLS services allow member public libraries to meet the needs of over 145,000 active library users, providing free education, low-cost recreation and economic development in our four county service area. Community members visited their public libraries 1 million times in 2018, borrowing more than 1.4 million library items. Over 300,000 computer sessions were facilitated and over 90,000 attended classes and events. These library activities promote community engagement, foster civic responsibility and enhance overall quality of life in our communities.

MVLS engenders efficiency and collaboration in public libraries by providing opportunities for libraries to share resources, provide services and innovate with technology. Virtually all books and other library materials are shared among libraries in the four counties through the system's integrated computer system and delivery service. In 2018 more than 210,000 items were accessed through this collaborative service. All 14 libraries participate in the shared computer services which provide network security and administration, full computer support and cooperative purchasing. More than 650 library leaders attended MVLS continuing education sessions, and more than 25,000 consultation contacts provided libraries with expertise in meeting service, administrative and technology challenges. This menu of services saves member libraries more than $500,000 each year, and provides the public with a degree and quality of library service that would not be possible without this collaboration.
